SUMMARY

LESSONS OF THE STUDIES MADE IN AFRICA SOUTH OF THE SAHARA

Enquiries into absenteeism and mobility of labour in various industries have yielded precise information concerning the relations between these criteria of adaptation and a large number of individual, industrial and sociological factors.

2. DIRECTIONS OF RESEARCH ACCORDING TO THE RESULTS OF THE AUTHORS

The phenomenon of adaptation to industrial work in less developed countries should be approached by paying much more serious attention to the economic and sociological conditions peculiar to the countries undergoing industrialisation.
